

Sometimes there is no wind at all.
Other times it's tugging at your clothes and messing up your hair.

Yet it can blow steadily from one direction for weeks and weeks.

Print and Book Awareness

Headings Reading 2.5

Point to and read the words “Wind and Weather” on page 24. Remind the students that these words are called a heading and that authors use headings to let readers know what they will be reading about in a section of the text. Ask what this section of text is about.

Sentences and End Punctuation: Periods

Have students come to the Big Book and point to the first and last words in each sentence on page 25. Have them point to the periods at the ends of sentences and say, “This is a period.”
